Samson Holding Statement

Following a year of unprecedented market conditions Samson Holding, the parent company of Willis & Gambier, have decided to make strategic changes in its global operation. The United Kingdom, following the Brexit decision made in 2016 is facing extremely challenging market conditions, with little sign of clarity. Furthermore, the change in customer buying patterns and expectations has added to the placed pressure on our division in the UK, Willis & Gambier.

After significant soul-searching we have concluded that Samson Holding is better placed to exit the UK market place by the end of April 2019, therefore Willis & Gambier will cease business operation at such time. Samson Holding will still have a presence in the UK with both hospitality projects and direct supply OEM projects, but both areas will be administered from Asia.

The team in Willis & Gambier are a committed, passionate and skilful group of colleagues and we will endeavour to help and support them through this transition.

Your sales representative will be in touch following this announcement and the office will be in operation as normal up until the closing date, to answer specific questions. Normal repeat orders taken up to and including 28th February will be supplied in the normal manner whilst stocks allow, with deliveries completed by 31st March 2019. We would like to thank you in advance for your patience and understanding during this sensitive time.

It has been a great pleasure doing business in the UK and in closing this operation of our organization in this country, we wish to thank you for your support. We wish you well for your future and bid you farewell.

Samson Holdings.
